The regular term of November court convened Monday morning with Hon. John G. Love, P. J., on the bench, and Prothonotary Gardner, Register Archey and Official Court Stenographer Burrows in their usual places.

The forenoon session was largely consumed in the presentation of motions and petitions of various counsel; auditors appointed at last session of court handed in their report; constables of the various townships and boroughs in the county made their usual quarterly returns.

The Court then appointed W. H. McCausland, of Philipsburg, Pa., foreman of the Grand Jury and after some instructions by the Court the Grand Jury retired to their room to consider and pass upon the different bills of indictment that are to be laid before them by District Attorney Spangler.

IRELAND'S FUTURE.

Somewhat Remarkable Speeches Delivered by the Earl of Dudley and J. Redmond.

BOTH WERE QUITE CONCILIATORY

The Earl Suggests a Round Table Conference of Landlord, Tenant and Interests in Ireland.

HER HAPPINESS MAY INCREASE

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Speeches which were delivered Monday by the Earl of Dudley, the new Lord Lieutenant for Ireland, and by John Redmond, the Irish leader, have aroused much comment as striking a more hopeful note on conciliation in the Irish question.

The Earl of Dudley, accompanied by the countess, was making an official visit to Belfast, and in reply to the speeches delivered at his reception he declared he had come to Ireland with the same spirit of impartial inquiry that animated Mr. Chamberlain to go to South Africa. The Irish Viceroy, proceeding then to deal with the land question as the key to the Irish problem, suggested that a sort of round table conference of the representatives of the landlord, tenants and other interests in Ireland should be held to endeavor to arrive at a mutual understanding and possibly some scheme for the good of Ireland and the increased happiness of her people.

While Lord Dudley was speaking at Belfast John R. Redmond was making an equal conciliatory speech at a demonstration of the London branches of the Irish league at the suburb of Bermondsey. He was immensely gratified, he said, to find on returning from the United States that the political situation in Ireland was more hopeful than he had known it for twenty-five years. While all rumors of Irish "deals" with the government were untrue, the political situation in Ireland had undergone an extraordinary and radical change, and he believed that no English minister since the Union had such a chance as the Irish secretary, Geo. Wyndham, now had. The time had arrived, as it did in every struggle, when the combatants were growing tired of the contest and were taking counsel as to whether it would not be brought to a satisfactory end.

For the first time in Irish history the majority of the landlords were speaking words of good sense, conciliation and reason. The tenants were divided and limited. At the same time, concluded Mr. Redmond, this would not affect the aspirations of the Irish people for home rule and he warned the government that if last session's land bills were re-introduced the Irish members would fight it line by line.

The Daily News, in connection with the speech made by the Earl of Dudley Monday, publishes a report that the government intends to deal with the return of Dublin Castle to the Irish administration and that it is considering a project which is not dissimilar to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's original plan of national councils.

Contracts for Improvements.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has awarded contracts for improvements which will prevent future freight congestion in and about Harrisburg. The contracts were awarded to H. S. Kerbaugh, of Philadelphia, and include the grading and track laying for large east and westbound classification freight yards at Fairview, on the Northern Central railroad; the grading and masonry for two additional tracks on the same line from Bridgeport, opposite Harrisburg, to Yorkhaven; the building of three miles of double track railroad from a point south of Yorkhaven to a point on the Susquehanna river opposite Schock's Mills, on the Columbia branch of the main line and a double track stone arch bridge, 2,200 feet long, across the Susquehanna river. The new classification yards at Fairview will be located on either side of the Northern Central tracks and will extend almost from Fairview to Marysville, a distance of six miles.

Side of His Face Blown Off.

A young man named Alabrand, of Horatio, Jefferson county, according to a dispatch from Karthaus, has terrible injuries as the result of a hunting accident and may die. His comrades missed him and hearing a shot went to see what he brought down. They found him with the side of his head blown off by the accidental discharge of his gun.

CENTRE COUNTY BIBLE SOCIETY.

Anniversary Services Held in Presbyterian Church—Eloquent Address by Rev. Ambrose Schmidt.

The anniversary meeting of the Centre county Bible Society was held in the Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon, and was largely attended by those interested in the work. The following ministers being present: Rev. Ambrose Schmidt, Rev. W. H. Brown, Rev. T. J. Askew, Rev. H. C. Holloway, D. D., Rev. W. P. Shriner, D. D. and Rev. R. P. Miller of Philipsburg. A fine and interesting program had been arranged by Rev. R. Crittenden, Secretary of the Society, who is so zealous in his labors to promote its cause, and to whom more than anyone else, is due the success it has attained in our county.

The music was rendered by the choir, and male quartette composed of Messrs. Shuey, Lukenbach, Smith and Whippo. Mr. L. T. Eddy of Millesburg sang a solo entitled "Your Mission." He has a magnificent baritone voice, with clear enunciation, that every word could be distinctly understood, and contributed much to the pleasure of the meeting. A class of little boys and girls, under the direction of Miss Overton sang a sweet little song, "The Praise of the Lord."

Rev. H. C. Holloway, D. D. offered the opening prayer, after which the congregation listened to the principle feature of the meeting, which was the anniversary address by Rev. Ambrose Schmidt, pastor of St. John's Reformed church, his subject being "The Bible." The speaker stated that of all literature published, whether ancient or modern, the Holy Bible took the lead. It was in greater demand than any other book, the supply being short of the requirements; that there is no other book bearing the character, nor having the influence and power. It has successfully stood the test of criticism, for ages, and is almost universally accepted as God's inspired word. The Reverend gentleman likened it unto a garden, where can be gathered choice and rare flowers of God's goodness and divine love. He compared it to a grand oratory of great masters, the one central theme being God's love for his children. He spoke of the importance of this sacred volume being in the hands of everyone, that they may learn of God's infinite love to all mankind, and his gracious offer of salvation to those who accept Christ as their Saviour, that its precious words might be a "Lamp unto their feet and a light unto their paths."

Mr. Schmidt gave a very interesting account of the work being accomplished by the various Bible Societies and Missionaries, in disseminating God's word throughout the world, and informed his hearers that more bibles have been sold in China in three months of this year, than in the eight years previous to the Boxer insurrection that the bible has been translated into four hundred and seventy-eight languages and dialects, and that the annual circulation is over three million volumes. He closed with an appeal for all christians to give every encouragement to the Society in its noble work.

Rev. Crittenden, Secretary, read his report, showing that last year he disposed of over seven hundred bibles and Testaments, one hundred and ninety-six of which, were given to those who were unable to buy them. He also spoke for a few minutes of his work in general, giving instances of the eager desire of many to possess a copy of the bible.

Clement Dale, Esq., Treasurer, made his report, showing a small balance on hand. A collection was taken, and a generous amount contributed. After a few remarks by Mr. James Harris, President of the Society, the congregation was dismissed with the benediction by Rev. R. P. Miller.

Hunters Found Babe in Woods.

While returning home Saturday evening three Italian hunters found a 3 months old baby hidden on the Harleigh mountains, near Hazelton, Pa. The deserted infant was suffering from cold and hunger. A bottle half filled with milk lay on the ground nearby. The hunters were attracted by the cries of the child. The infant was taken to Hazelton and placed in the home of detention. Fully a hundred mothers called to see the babe, in order to establish its identity if possible, but the authorities gained no clew from this source.

Socialists Polled 400,000 Votes.

GIRARD, Kan., Nov. 24.—The Appeal to Reason, having completed the canvass, places the Socialist vote in the United States at the recent election at 400,000. The heaviest Socialist vote was polled in Massachusetts, 36,435.

MANY TRAINS MOVED

Estimated That 50,000 Cars Were Moved Into and Out of Pittsburg Sunday.

THERE WAS A GREAT RUN

In Five Hours Ninety-five Trains Were Started Toward Altoona, Twenty Per Cent. Heavier Than the Record.

A NUMBER OF TRAINMEN INJURED

PITTSBURG, November 24.—After thirty-six hours of the most strenuous activity on the part of greatly augmented forces of men and locomotives, the Pennsylvania railroad system had a comparative cleaning up of its congested terminals. The car movement breaks all records for a similar time. It is estimated that 50,000 cars were moved into and out of Pittsburg. In five hours ninety five trains were started for Altoona, 20 per cent. heavier than the record.

The work accomplished in the yards of the Allegheny Valley and West Penn divisions of the Pennsylvania and on the Pittsburg and Akron division of the Baltimore and Ohio, was equally great. On the Monongahela division of the Pennsylvania, the one section that was almost completely paralyzed by congestion, a vast number of cars were moved. These cars were chiefly laden with coke and coal destined for points west of Pittsburg. They were hauled out in trains of from sixty-five to eighty cars each toward their destinations and at the some time empty cars were hauled up to the mines and coke ovens for loading.

The almost entire tie-up of the blast furnaces and steel mills of the Shenango and Mahoning valleys caused traffic managers to give preference, as far as possible, to the movement of the classes of freight upon which a continuance of the operation of the industrial plants depend.

In the yards of the Pittsburg and Lake Erie and the Baltimore and Ohio, similar work was accomplished. As these roads were not in as bad shape as the Pennsylvania system, they had less to do and their terminals are comparatively close to normal conditions to night.

The number of accidents to trainmen during the day was high. This is attributed to the fact that a large number of new men were engaged to fill out shunting crews in the yards. Before 6 o'clock eight men were reported to have been taken to the West Penn hospital to be treated for injuries received during the day, varying from slight to serious.

It is estimated that during the twenty-four hours ending at 4 o'clock Monday morning 929 trains, consisting of 46,225 cars, were moved in and out of Pittsburg as follows:

Pennsylvania 290 trains, 14,270 cars; Ft. Wayne 180 trains, 9,000 cars; Panhandle 245 trains, 12,025 cars; Baltimore and Ohio 90 trains, 4,500 cars; Pittsburg and Lake Erie 120 trains, 6,000 cars. The estimated tonnage is 1,756,550 tons

What Luck Means.

Luck is our own making. Luck means rising at 6 in the morning, living on one dollar a day if you make two, minding your own business, and not meddling with other people's; luck means the hardships and privations which you have not hesitated to endure the long nights that you have devoted to work; luck means the appointments you have never failed to catch; luck means trusting in God and your own resources, a religion whose motto is "Help yourself and heaven will help you." Luck comes home to those who help themselves and know how to wait.

Hunters Having a Harvest.

That game is plentiful is proven by the statement that thus far 35 deer have been shot and killed in what is commonly called the Scootac region and the season is but one-half over. Fifteen bear have been killed or trapped this fall. In the Seven mountain district about 20 deer have been killed and taking the rest of Centre county, there must have been 45 deer killed thus far.

Serious Time From a Pinched Pimple

Richard Lutz, a carpenter of Bellefonte, has had a serious time with blood poisoning. About ten days ago he pinched a pimple which he noticed on his leg. A few days later the leg began to swell until it was twice its normal size. It also turned black. It was feared that amputation would be necessary, but it is now believed that this can be averted.

SHORT AND PITHY.

Silence is often the best apology.

The latest fad,—Advancing wages.

Wisdom consists less in what is said than in what is left unsaid.

It is when a man is painting the town red that he has most green in his eye.

The light word of the man we meet often counts for more than the wisdom of dead sages.

Where one man talks because he has something to say ten men talk because they like to hear themselves talk.

When the dead past has buried its dead there are always some fools on hand to reprint the obituary notices.

One can imagine nothing sillier than the conversation of half a dozen young girls until one has heard the conversation of half a dozen young men.

And still the railroads all over the country are advancing the wages of their men. Such a thing never occurred under a Democratic administration. No never.

In Wisconsin the state constitution prohibits the giving of passes to public officials. If that law was in vogue in Pennsylvania lots of our public servants would stay at home or walk.

John Mitchell distinguished himself as a witness before the coal arbitrators. He is too much for the lawyers, and is becoming more popular with the people every day. John has a head of the level variety.

When Judge Smith gets his "dutch up" he can show Governor Stone what a sick man can do when necessity requires action. All the Judge needed was a tonic, he took it, and splendid results followed.

Ex-Governor Pattison is to have the Democratic caucus nomination for United States Senator. Hooray for Mr. Pattison. He is going to have mighty honors showered upon him, even though they be empty ones.

The idea of "Teddie" going to Mississippi to hunt bears was absurd. He might have known better. There is nothing down there but Democrats who to their credit did the handsome thing by our President.

The public school teachers in Chicago are keeping pace with the times and have formed a union. They are now in a position to dictate terms to the authorities, and the citizens of the "windy city" are anxiously waiting developments.

Now since the Yale bull dogs and Princeton tigers have settled their difficulties on the field of combat, would it not be well for those animals to devote as much attention to improving their minds as they did to forming muscle.

Republican politicians are on the qui vive to learn who will compose Governor Pennypacker's cabinet. We are in ignorance ourselves as to who they will be, but are confident his official family will be composed of honest, capable and reputable men.

In Illinois they claim to be entitled to the speakership because they never had one. The reason of this is they don't have the stuff to make speakers of. Now, we have John Dalzell who is just the kind of a chap to fill the bill. An ideal man is John!

Let everyone prepare to celebrate Thanksgiving day in a proper manner. We have true cause for expression of our thanks, and should remember that our prayers of thankfulness should go up to Almighty God "from whom cometh every good and perfect gift."

Senator Tillman has been distinguishing himself by heading a mob in South Carolina that was determined to lynch a negro prisoner. This is in strict accord with his brutal instincts. It is to be hoped this bully will soon be retired to private life, respectable people are disgusted with him.

Don't worry about the rumors of a plot to assassinate President Roosevelt. Everyone is his friend, and no one desires to have harm befall him, even his political enemies admire his independence and straightforward course in discharging the duties of chief magistrate. They recognize in him a man who has the courage of his convictions, and is his own master.

Mr. Frick the iron and steel magnate is emulating the example of his multi-millionaire friends Carnegie, Schwab, et al. and is making plans to build a university in Pittsburg and donate it to that city. We have been contemplating doing something handsome for Bellefonte, but find two obstacles, the first being to determine what Bellefonte needs, and the second lack of money.

ALMOST SECURED IT.

Socialists Only 400 Votes Removed from Controlling Federation Convention.

STRON SPEECHES MADE

Had the Resolution Passed it Would Have Committed the Body to the Doctrine of Socialism.

NO OTHER BUSINESS CONSIDERED

NEW ORLEANS, La., November 21.—The socialists came within 400 votes of securing the control of the convention of the American Federation of Labor Thursday. The struggle lasted almost the entire day and many able speeches were made on both sides, notably those of D. A. Hayes, James Duncan and President Gompers against the socialists, and Victor Berger Max Hayes and W. B. Wilson, of the United Mine Workers, in behalf of the revolution introduced by Delegate Berger and amended by Delegate Wilson in a manner acceptable to Berger, The debate lasted until 6 o'clock in the evening, when a roll call showed 4,744 votes against the amendment of Mr. Wilson and 4,344 in favor of it. The miners voted solidly in favor of the amendment. No business was transacted in the convention during the day other than the report of the committee which investigated the Gompers-Shaffer trouble, and which report completely exonerated Gompers.

The resolution introduced by Victor L. Berger, of Milwaukee, committed the convention to the doctrines of socialism. The committee on resolutions reported, as a similar committee had reported at the Scranton convention of last year that the principles of trades union movement contain all that is necessary at the present time for the advancement of the workingmen of the country. Delegate Max Hayes, offered a substitute for the report of the convention to the effect that the federation advise the working people to organize their economic and political power to secure for labor the full eqcivalent of its toil and the overthrow of the wages system and establishing an industrial, co-operative democracy.

The substitute was ruled out of order by the chair as being a substitute.

Delegate Hayes then offered it as an amendment and it was so admitted by the chair. Delegate Wilson proposed to amend the amendment by striking out the words "And the overthrowal of the wage system and establishing an industrial co-operative democracy."

Delegate Hayes declared this acceptable to him, no action was taken and the debate proceeded.

From 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 5.40 o'clock, the debate went on, President Gompers being the last speaker. He urged the union men to adhere closely to union principles, declaring that there successes would be greater than it would be if they followed any other decision than that under which they were organized.

A motion was made by Delegate C. H. Barter to lay the matter on the table was lost. A roll call was demanded, the vote being on the adoption of the Wilson amendment to the Berger resolution. It was lost, 4,77 to 4,344.

A Trains Wild Dash.

The crew of New York Central freight train, No. 48, east bound, had a thrilling escape in Karthaus tunnel Sunday night. As the tunnel is a mile and a half long and curves in the middle, a watchman goes through every half hour to examine the rails. Notwithstanding this precaution, several large boulders fell from the roof Sunday night after the watchman had passed and the train, running forty miles an hour, dashed into them. The locomotive passed through and over them and was almost stripped clean of its trappings. Some of the rocks were found twenty car lengths behind the cab, so great was the train's momentum. Not one of the crew was seriously injured, but, they were almost suffocated by escaping steam and soft coal smoke.

Mountains Alive With Hunters.

The Centre Hall Reporter says: The Seven mountains are alive with hunters. Every few miles there is a camp well supplied with ammunition and accoutrements for a week's stay. Game is continually being chased and has no time to rest or recover from excitement.

The train from the east Monday morning on reaching the mountains had no less than 30 dogs in the express car. Dogs and hunters left the train at almost every station until Lemont was reached.

CASHIER LUKENBACH RESIGNS.

Leaves Philipsburg Bank to Enter Blair County National Bank.

Frank K. Lukenbach, the popular cashier of the First National bank, this city, has tendered his resignation with a view of associating himself with the Blair County Banking Co., of Tyrone, which is reorganizing and will hereafter be known as the Blair County National Bank. He has been made vice president and will have general charge of the institution, which will be one of the strongest banking houses in this part of the state. He will assume his new role on January 1st next.

While his multitude of friends are delighted to note his rise in banking circles, which means much more to him financially, there will be general regret over his resignation and the removal of himself and excellent family from our town. As cashier of the First National bank, and his connection with that institution previously, Mr. L. proved his general fitness for the responsibilities imposed upon him in his important work, and by his courteous and pleasing qualities made many friends for himself as well as the institution he so faithfully served.

He is just such a man as Philipsburg can ill afford to lose, but as the fates have decreed it otherwise we bow to the inevitable, wish him well and congratulate Tyrone in securing a citizen so worthy and a splendid family.—Philipsburg Journal.

A Young Philipsburg Man Commits Suicide.

Charles Vaux, a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Vaux, of Philipsburg, committed suicide Tuesday night. The sad affair took place about 11 o'clock at the Central hotel at Philipsburg. The young men and his sister, Miss Matilda, who is employed at the hotel, and another young lady, cook at the hotel, to whom he has been paying attention for some time, were sitting around the table in the kitchen conversing, mentioning incidentally some little personal grievances. Suddenly he said "Good-bye," and pulling from his pocket a 32-caliber revolver deliberately shot himself through the heart, death resulting instantly. The revolver, with which he committed the rash act, had been purchased only a couple of days ago, possibly with a view of committing suicide. The body was viewed by B. J. LaPorte, acting as Coroner, and as there were witnesses to the shooting, he deemed it unnecessary to hold an inquest.

The young man was aged about 20 years, and is survived by his parents, four brothers and four sisters. He was a member of the Hope Fire Co., of Philipsburg a coal miner, and had many friends who will regret the sad ending of his life.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures the catarhr. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. A NARROW ESCAPE.

Drayman McClenahan Narrowly Escaped Being Buried Alive.

William McClenahan, the drayman, last week narrowly escaped death by being buried alive in a gravel pit above town.

As is his custom Will endeavored to take advantage of opportunities to lessen labor and shorten the time it takes to do a piece of work. With this end in view he backed the rear end of his wagon into the gravel pit, the top of which was only a few feet higher than the wagon box, and gently tapped the convex ceiling of the pit with a pick. Each stroke brought a reasonable return of earth and gravel. In this manner the rear portion of the wagon box was filled and then shoveled to the front end. The wagon was about half filled when for some reason the workman had occasion to pass around the rear end of the wagon, and no sooner had he emerged from the cavern than on his very heels tons of earth dropped, completely covering almost half of the wagon.

The heavy load on the rear of the wagon box caused the front end to rise high enough to strike the bank and, of course, empty its contents, on the wreck. Had the drayman been a minute later in leaving the pit he would have been crushed to death under the heavy pressure of earth. His position on the wagon was no less perilous, for had he been there when the cave-in occurred there would have been a crushing of bones and a dead, dead, dead William McClenahan.

Knowledge.

Have you ever thought how little besides knowledge passes from generation to generation? Of those things absolutely necessary to life and comfort very little beyond the needs of the immediate present accumulates. Of food most necessary of all, strive all we can, the limit of accumulation is but a few months. And of those things which give purely physical comfort—clothing, fuel, shelter—with all our modern mechanisms and methods of preservation, we little more than keep abreast of daily demands. In art and literature only do we produce tangible things that survive for the benefit of the future.

But there is one thing that we do gain and give and accumulate from generation to generation—a thing more lasting than any work of art or of literature—more lasting than even the ruins of the greatest monuments, and of more value than all the products of man combined—the one thing that no fire, no flood, no drouth, no disease, no famine, noiconvulsions of nature can ever destroy—knowledge.—New York News.

Persian Rice Recipe.

A woman who lived in Persia for fifteen years despairs because the rice which she buys in this country refuses to puff into the snowy mass that is so readily assumes on its native shores. She clings to the Persian method of preparing it. After putting it through several rinsings in cold water, to remove all the loose flour on the outside of the grains, the rice is placed in a large quantity of cold water and put over the fire.

It is allowed to boil very hard, until it is swollen to its full size and begins to soften. Then it is turned into a colander and cold water is turned over it until it is dry. The last step is to put butter into the bottom of the kettle, turn in the rice and leave it until it is heated through but not browned. In Persia the entire mass will respond to this treatment by swelling into a light, foamy consistency. When the rice is turned into a dish the butter goes with it, and permeates every kernel.

In Persia no one thinks of throwing away the water in which the rice is cooked. It is used in the preparation of tomato sauce, in stewing prunes, apricots and other fruits and for various culinary purposes.

Missing Man Found.

While hunting in the woods north of Williamsport Monday afternoon, William Crose stumbled over a man lying on his face, and thinking him asleep, tapped the sole of his shoe to awaken him. He found the leg stiff, and investigation revealed a bullet hole in his head.

The fellow was found to be Morris Hitchcock, a young silk weaver, who had been missing since last Thursday, when he disappeared from his boarding house, taking his roommate's 32-calibre revolver and leaving his own 22-calibre pistol behind. The pistol was at his side. He had been ill and was despondent. A posse of men had been searching several days for Hitchcock, but failed to find even the slightest clue.

PICTURESQUE BRITTANY.

A Market Scene In This Quaint French Province.

Brittany is a land where the peasants till the earth in zouave trousers, toreador jackets covered with arabesque embroideries and green waistcoats around which run lines of crimson. The women wear short red skirts, great medici collars and coifs that flutter about their heads like the wings of doves. From beneath the points of their black caps the children gaze at you with wide eyes full of the curiosity of animals.

These people live in houses built of sculptured granite and sleep in open-work closets carved like the moucharabieks of Egypt.

In spite of the "Breton Interiors" and "Returns of the Fishermen" with which painters swamp the market this race is still unknown or misunderstood, for they should be seen not in paintings, but in their homes, in their old time streets, on market days and when, in fair time, the tents are pitched in the village market places.

Fiery little horses draw to market fish, fine vegetables and all the early produce of Roscoff. They are spread out upon the sidewalk. Chickens cackle; goats bleat; pigs, tied by the leg, strain toward the vegetables, sniffing at the fresh greens.

Farmers in sabots, carrying great blue umbrellas under their arms, with the two ribbons of their felt hats floating down their backs, pick their way among the Dinan china displayed on the ground—capacious soup tureens, cider jugs and plates covered with painted flowers and grotesque figures.

The peasants converse with but few gestures; they bargain in gutteral tones.

These taciturn people forget themselves in the barrooms on fair days. The taverns are full of noise. You may hear the sound of an accordion and the plaintive note of the biniou (a sort of bagpipe), leading monotonous dances.

Into the harbor come boats laden with fish; other boats go out. The fishermen are full of business. Next week will occur the departure for the new country. There are women who weep.

LITERARY TREASURES.

Some Which Have Been and Some Which May Be Lost to View.

The world, we have been assured time and again, knows nothing of its greatest men. Perhaps it is equally ignorant about its greatest books. Are we quite sure that the idols in our literary pantheon are arrayed in their due order of precedence? The rules of precedence change, and who shall assert that those prevalent at any given time are the final ones? But, above all, are we quite certain that there may not be a notable work of genius lying unnoticed and unknown amid the wrecks of the river of time, waiting only for some lucky accident that shall reveal it in all its beauty to an astonished world?

Such accidents with such results have been frequent in the history of the past. Indeed such accidents have preserved or have revealed to the world no insignificant proportion of its now acknowledged masterpieces.

The books of the Bible themselves have experienced the narrowest escapes from what might have resulted in their total loss. The most notable example is that of Deuteronomy, which disappeared from the Jewish world for over a century. The story of its rediscovery by the high priest Hezekiah during the reign of good King Josiah is set forth in the Old Testament.

Shakespeare was practically forgotten in the days when Addison wrote his "Account of the Greatest English Poets," with never a mention of the name of the very greatest, yet it was shortly afterward that Shakespeare was resuscitated.

Fitzgerald's "Omar Khayyam" and Blackmore's "Lorna Doone" dropped stillborn from the press and later won a sudden popularity by accident.—William S. Walsh in Era Magazine.

Patience With Eccentricity.

Many of the leading people in English society regarded Thomas Carlyle with a feeling almost akin to reverent delight when he chose to behave like an ignorant boor in their drawing rooms, even taking his seat, it is said, unbidden in the presence of the queen. This generation, however, has little patience with such eccentricities.

It was an English bishop who, when the historian Freeman had worn out his patience with his rudeness, introduced him to a waiting audience as "the distinguished scholar that so admirably describes and illustrates the savagery of our ancestors."

They Were Stayers.

After a dinner given by Stephen Price of Drury Lane theater, all the guests but Theodore Hook and the Rev. Edward Cannon retired. Price was suffering from gout, but as they disregarded his hints to retire he stole off and left them in high talk.

On the following morning Price inquired of his servant, "Pray, at what time did those gentlemen go last night?"

"Go, sir?" replied John. "They're not gone, sir. They have just rung for coffee."

Mrs. T. Briddleman, of Parshallville, Mich. was troubled with salt rheum for thirteen years and tried a number of doctors without relief. After two or three applications of Banner Salve, her hands became better and in a short time she was entirely cured. C. M. Parrish.

A Lebanon man tells the following for a fact: One day a Linn county farmer bought a banana at his store, the first one he had ever eaten. After finishing it he threw the peel on the floor. After gazing at it a moment he picked it up and wrapped it in a piece of paper and remarked:

"Guess I'll take that home to my wife and let her see what a banana looks like. She never seed one."

WEEDS

Consumption is a human weed flourishing best in weak lungs. Like other weeds it's easily destroyed while young; when old, sometimes impossible.

Strengthen the lungs as you would weak land and the weeds will disappear.

The best lung fertilizer is Scott's Emulsion. Salt pork is good too, but it is very hard to digest.

The time to treat consumption is when you begin trying to hide it from yourself. Others see it, you won't.

Don't wait until you can't deceive yourself any longer. Begin with the first thought to take Scott's Emulsion. If it isn't really consumption so much the better; you will soon forget it and be better for the treatment. If it is consumption you can't expect to be cured at once, but if you will begin in time and will be rigidly regular in your treatment you will win.

Scott's Emulsion, fresh air, rest all you can, eat all you can, that's the treatment and that's the best treatment.

GROWING DEFICITS.

Confront the German Empire This Year.

THE SHORTAGE IS $52,250,000

Warning to the Reichstag—Increased Tax on Beer and Tobacco Suggested.

THAT COURSE WOULD BE UNPOPULAR

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—In the Reichstag yesterday the Secretary of the Treasury, Baron von Thielmann, announced that the deficit in the Imperial Budget for 1903 was estimated to be $37,500,000. The Budget, he added, would be submitted in two or three weeks. The deficit for 1902 was $14,750,000.

It would not do, the Secretary said, to be always providing for deficits by loans, nor could the contributions of the Federated States be increased. Nevertheless, it was probable the States would ultimately have to bear the deficit. What ought to be done was to increase the imperial revenues so as to balance the expenditures. Looking around for suitable objects for increased taxation he saw beer and tobacco, and he begged the members of the House to keep these in view while thinking how to balance the Budget.

PENSION FOR WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.

Baron von Thielmann also intimated that the government intended as soon as practicable to propose pensions for widows and orphans. He was quite unable to say how much such pensions would be an extension of the state insurance laws and treasury burdens, but the suggestion was made that $25 per person yearly was insufficient. Assuming that $50 was enough for the pensions of widows and orphans, it would take $40,000,000. It was impossible to say how much the government tariff bill would yield, but a mere mechanical estimate, based on the present imports, showed the customs receipts would increase $20,500,000. The supporters of the Commission's tariff schedule thought a total of $125,000,000 would be derived. Secretary von Thielmann mentioned considerations that reduced the estimate largely.

CAUSE OF THE DEFICIT.

The Secretary's hint that the government was meditating pensions for widows and orphans caused a stir among the members, because it is one of the things the Socialists advocate. The deficit is the result of the financial depression which still affects almost every form of business, limiting the purchasing power of every class. While there have been no large failures recently, various symptoms of continued hard times appear. At the Krupp works 50,000 laborers have had their time reduced two hours daily, and some deparments are shutting down each week. The iron syndicates are reorganizing, and prices recently were again cut. The number of employed persons, according to the municipal censuses, is barely fewer than a year ago.

TAXES ON BEER AND TOBACCO.

Secretaries of Finance before this have thought of levying fresh contributions on beer and tobacco, which now have exceptionally low duties, the tobacco import dues being one-third those of the United States. The beer dues are also below those of other countries. The empire collects no beer tax, that heretofore being left to the several States, whose rates vary. The principal reason which has deterred the laying of an imperial tax on beer was that it would disturb the relations with Bavaria, which relies a great deal on its beer tax, which is still low enough to permit Bavaria to sell largely to outside States. Bavaria has always pointed out that if the empire taxed beer it would injure Bavaria more than the other States, that it would not be fair play, and that it would impair Bavaria's regard for the imperial tie.

The additions of beer and tobacco taxes are certain to be highly unpopular.

What is Wrong With the Weather?

Thursday and Thursday night were marked by the dense fog overhanging Bellefonte. Many of our oldest citizens say they never experienced a similar state of affairs and the railroad men tell us that it is the first time they have ever known the fog to be so dense during the entire day as to interfere with their operations.

We have never been in London, but some of our friends who have been so fortunate as to see that thriving burg which has been made famous by its murky and foggy atmosphere, tell us that Thursday was typical London weather.

Old Sol is trying to assert himself but up to the present writing has not made much headway, though we hope he will break through the lowering clouds and brighten up things.

MR. GILLILAND CANED.

"The Regulars" Remember Their Old Comrade—No Need of a Rabbit's Foot.

J. M. Gilliland, of New Bloomfield, on last Tuesday evening was the recipient of a present very highly prized by him. In recognition of Mr. Gilliland being the oldest member of the hunting club, known as the Regulars; in age as well as in actual experience, the club presented him with a cane made by one of its members, the worlds renowned fiddle builder, Rev. W. W. Rhodes, of Idaville, Pa. The cane is made of two hundred and thirty-two pieces of wood. Some of the wood comes from South Africa and Brazil. The main part of the stem is white oak, cut from the camp ground, where the club has camped for a number of years, the head being made from a laurel root, procured at the spring that furnished the water for camp use. The head of the cane represents the head of an animal so indispensable to deer hunting in former years—the dog. The cane is a marvel of beauty and workmanship. Rev. Rhoads spent parts of five years in making the cane, some of the work being done in camp on wet days and in the evenings. The cane in coaching Mr. Gilliland in his declining years, will bring many recollections to him not mentioned in his history of the club he wrote a few years ago, which if printed and put up in book form would fill volumes; volumes that would cure the worst case of dyspepsia by reading them. "They would make you laugh, they would make you cry, they would sweep the cobwebs from the sky.—Centre Reporter.

Death of a Former Resident of Bellefonte.

Mrs. Annie W., wife of Dr. Joseph L. Lemberger, died at 10:20 o'clock, on Wednesday evening of Bright's disease at the home 11 North Ninth street, Lebanon, Pa. For more than a year she had been a sufferer from the ravages of the disease but her condition became alarming only three weeks ago. By her death the city loses one of its best known and most highly esteemed residents, who will be much missed in church and charitable work, with which she was prominently identified, giving of her time and money in its advancement. A wide circle of friends who loved her sincerely, mourn her death and extend their sincere sympathy to the bereaved husband.

Mrs. Lemberger was the daughter of the late William Ward, Esq., of Bellefonte, Centre county, and was married on June 23, 1864. She was a member of the board of managers of the Good Samaritan hospital and the Widows' home. She was a member of St. Luke's Episcopal church and was identified with all its organizations, being particularly interested in the church home, at Jonestown. Besides her husband, who is senior member of the drug firm of Dr. Joseph L. Lemberger & Co., and treasurer of the board of foreign missions of the Reformed church, a brother living in Cleveland, O., survives her.

The funeral took place last Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with services at the house and interment at Mt. Lebanon cemetery.

Sunday For The Children.

A nice way to amuse children on Sabbath day is to get some colored pencils and a scratch-book. Then take up the study of the trees, plants, flowers and leaves of the bible. Have them draw with their colored pencils in the scratch book; to give you an idea, I will say the almond tree. You may be obliged to consult an encyclopedia. Then tell them about it; how it blooms before it leaves, and that Aaron's rod was of this tree, and other facts which will lead to pleasant discussions. Then you can have them write underneath the tree they have drawn a short description. You can also take up the study of the minerals, animals and insects. In the spring, summer and autumn you can take walks and rides to the timber, gather leaves and flowers, and talk to them of God's goodness in giving us much to enjoy. I think you will find this very pleasant and profitable work. You will also be gaining the confidence of your children. Sunday will not seem like such a long, lonesome day, but a blessed day, because it will be spent in a profitable way, to the glory of God, and with father and mother so much better than letting them run at will. Of course I mean this should be after Sunday school and church.

One of the greatest evils of the day is the breaking of the fourth commandment by so much Sunday visiting just for amusement and pleasure, that christians should do all in their power against it.—By Mrs. Mary Barnes.

"SOME PUMPKINS."

Butchering in Full Sway, Bright Young Ladies and Other Notes.

The first new subscriber whom I gathered in last Monday morning was Isaac Sager, of Bellefonte. When I reached Wingate Nander Bumbarger, of that place, consented to take it. I dined at the home of George Somers, in the same locality. The next subscriber was Miss Lucy Smoyer, of Runville. Still later Mrs. Annie R. Lucas, of Runville, permitted me to add her name. Mrs. Daniel Poorman, of Runville, lead the way into a rear apartment and there I saw displayed a large number of pumpkins of truly extraordinary size. Several of those in Sheffer & Son's store a week ago were from this collection. Five of them weighed 422 pounds, and twelve of them, weighing about 1,000 pounds, grew on only two vines. What pumpkin-pie possibilities are there.

Tuesday was gloomy and wet and I descended Flick Hollow to the public road. I do not believe I have passed that way for several years without hearing of more or less typhoid fever. This time there seemed to be more than usual. One death occurred more than two weeks ago—the wife of James Flick. She was an estimable lady. At present two of his grandchildren are ill with the same disease. Medical skill ought to be able to discover the cause for such a disease so that the disease and its sad results may be extirpated. I reached Unionville that night and called at the home of Daniel Buck with gratifying results. Rain that day interfered with my progress and work.

Next day I went far out toward the mountains on the west and dined with the family of B. R. Stere. where also I added the name of S. N. Stere, who was at work on a corn crib and wagon shed. Next door I met Wm. Sanderson, an old-time subscriber, and at the next house Andrew J. Hoover subscribed. Then along the Julian pike the name of Joseph Swisher was added. Up toward the mountain again Philip Straw was butchering and after climbing over several hills and down into deep valleys the pleasant home of W. A. Hartsock was reached. This property is circled by hills and so thoroughly protected that early frosts do not interfere with the maturing of the crops. They made my stay as pleasant as possible. Coming down next day among the Stivers, Steeles and Williamses, I dined with Jasper Steele and then went over past Abednego Williams' house to see James McDonald who also has been taking the REPUBLICAN many years. He is a veteran of the war and a Republican of the most strenuous type.

Along the plank road J. H. Crain, of Port Matilda, said he would take the REPUBLICAN. Then I repaired to the home of Wilson Williams, who is also a Civil war veteran. He is the father of A. C. Williams, who was a candidate for prothonotary a few years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Williams and two bright, amiable daughters constitute the household. Both daughters are public school teachers. Their ability and helpfulness may be better understood when it is remembered that one of them served as census enumerator a couple of years ago and did the work skillfully and accurately.

Next day W. G. Weston and H. S. Gates, who live only a short distance apart, became subscribers. At the home of the former I saw our friend, A. I. Garbrick, who is engaged in erecting a new house. Then he is also erecting a new church building for the United Brethren congregation at Black Oak.

The death of Samuel Cowher on the 10th instant produced a profound sensation. He was in the prime of life and apparently the embodiment of health and strength, and was cut off literally within an hour. I met him on a previous visit and was shocked to hear of his death. His widow and children have the sincere sympathy of all.

NEWTON S. BAILEY.

The Warmest November.

Not for years has the month of November been so warm as has the first fifteen days of this month. For the first half of the month the temperature has been 3 degrees warmer than upon the warmest November in recent years, that of 1896, when the average was 48 degrees. The average so far has been 51 degrees and the only cool weather experienced was during the early and late hours of the day.

Overcoats have not been necessary during any day during the month and an unusual thing in connection with this unprecedented weather is the blooming of various flowers in many of the gardens in this place. Roses, morning glories and dandelions are in bloom in some sections of this place as though it were midsummer.

In 1894 the mercury dropped to an average of 40 degrees during the month and since then it has been much lower during some of the Novembers of the past few years.

THE OHIO RIVER.

Many of Its Picturesque Features of the Past Are Gone.

The Ohio is no longer the beautiful river it once was. It flowed in majestic curves and sweeps through a limitless paradise. The glory of that river in the barbaric splendor of an autumn day was beyond description. Robed from the Alleghanies to the Mississippi in her gorgeous fabric of maple and sycamore, which everywhere drooped down to the stately flood, shimmering, bending in her course with considerate and majestic dignity, a trip on one of the brightly painted steamboats was the event of a lifetime. There was also a dignity in the steamboats. They did not pant and rattle like a locomotive, nor were they silent like an ocean steamer. The long, huge steam cylinders, with deliberation and a soft though pervading sound, blew huge clouds of steam into the air. The river steamers were the Monte Carlos of the new world. Every one of them carried its contingent of professional gamblers, each of whom had a "bowie" in his boot leg. These men, unmolested, traveled the year round between Pittsburg and New Orleans, fleecing the unwary and paying a percentage to the captains.

The Ohio is a noble river yet, though winding through forest denuded hills. The orchards and cornfields are attractive. It promised once to become the Rhine in vineyards, but the grapes were smitten with a rust which destroyed the crops until the attempt was abandoned. It will never be crowned with feudal castles in ruins, but the groves will be replanted, and another century end will see it once more the "beautiful river."—Chicago Interior.

NOTED ANAGRAMS.

Ingenious Transmutation of the Names of Well Known Persons.

Anagrams that transmute the names of well known men and women are often startlingly appropriate. What could be better in this way than these announcements, evolved from two great statesmen's names when the reins of power changed hands: Gladstone, "G leads not!" Disraeli, "I lead, sir!" Quite as happy is the comment on the devoted nursing of Florence Nightingale, whose name yields "Flit on, cheering angel." Among those that are most often quoted we may mention Horatio Nelson, "Honor est a Nilo;" Charles James Stuart, "Claims Arthur's Seat;" Pilate's question, "Quid est veritas?" ("What is truth?"), answered by "Est Vir qui adest," ("It is the man here present."); Swedish Nightingale, "Sing high, sweet Linda;" David Livingstone, "D. V., go and visit Nile;" the Marquess of Ripon (who resigned the grand mastership of Freemasons when he became a Romanist), "R. I. P., quoth Freemasons;" Charles Prince of Wales, "All France calls, Oh, help!" Sir Roger Charles Doughty Tichborne, baronet, 'Yon horrid butcher Orton, biggest rascal here." And many shorter specimens, such as telegraph, "great help;" astronomers, "no more stars" and "moon starers;" one hug, "enough;" editors, "so tired;" tournament, "to run at men;" penitentiary, "nay, I repent;" old England, "golden land;" revolution, "to love ruin;" fashionable, "one-half bias;" lawyers, "sly ware;" midshipman, "mind his map;" poorhouse, "Oh, sour hope;" Presbyterian, "best in prayer;" sweetheart, "there we sat;" matrimony, "into my arm."—Chambers' Journal.

Bank Washing Day.

In some banks there is a regular washday every month, usually at the beginning, when a clerk may be seen bent over a tub and rubbing real money up and down a washboard. The dirty greenbacks that have been saved up for a month are soaped and rubbed just like handkerchiefs and socks and are run through a wringer before being put out to dry. The paper currency may be handled somewhat roughly, as it does not tear because there is in it a great deal of silk and linen. After the notes have been passed through the wringer they are hung on a line stretched in the bank clerks' department. Said one clerk the other day: "I wash about 100 notes every month, and when I'm done you can hardly tell them from new money. The washing strengthens as well as cleans the notes."—Philadelphia Record.

Sustaining His Theory.

No man is a real man of science unless he is ready to abandon his own conclusions, duly put on record, if subsequent investigations prove them fallacious. The president of a great college once wrote a volume on the practice of medicine. After it had been completed and he had gone to New York to arrange for its publication his house was burned, and the manuscript of his book and all his notes were destroyed.

He couldn't reproduce it. Ten years afterward he said: "That fire was the greatest of good fortune to me. If I had published the book, I should have had to stand by it, whereas now I know that it was all wrong!"

Mr. Andrew Lang in Longman's Magazine tells of two geologists who were gathering specimens in a lonely mountain place. One of them had written a book. The other, looking about one day with a fieldglass, saw his friend occupied a long time—unobserved, as he thought—in rolling a great stone down hill and at dinner questioned him about it.

He pretended at first that he had been doing it for exercise, but, hard pressed, confessed:

"Well, the fact is the confounded thing was 300 feet too high to suit my theory!"

FLAGS ON THE CAPITOL.

What It Means When They Are Flying at Half Mast.

The flying of flags over the capitol at half mast is regulated by the strictest rules. Whenever these flags are seen floating half way down the mast it is a sure indication that a vice president, senator or representative is lying dead or that the action is taken in response to a presidential proclamation ordering the flags on public buildings at half mast in respect to the memory of some prominent official of the government who has passed away.

When the sergeant at arms of the senate or house of representatives learns of the death of a member of either of those bodies, he at once orders that the flags over the senate chamber or hall of representatives be half masted. This is often done before the houses of congress themselves are officially notified of the death. A good deal of discretion is exercised in the manner of placing the news of a death of this kind officially before the senate or the house. Upon such an announcement it is customary for the houses to adjourn in respect to the deceased senator or representative, and in order that the current business may not be stopped early in the day the announcement is generally made just before the houses are ready to conclude their day's work.

Officers of the senate and house when they fly the flags at half mast in response to a proclamation by the president regard their action as one of courtesy, as they do not recognize the power of the president to order congress to do anything except to assemble in extraordinary session. They have always responded to the requests of such proclamations. It would be a nice question, if one could imagine that it could ever be raised, to know to what extent the president's authority would allow him to order flags at half mast on the capitol. While his authority would not extend over the employees of the senate and house, yet the capitol itself for many years was in fact controlled exclusively by him so far as the care of the building is concerned, and the superintendent of the building is today appointed by him without confirmatory action on the part of the senate.

As a matter of fact, the capitol has for years been under the direct control of the committees on appropriations of the two houses of congress, but that control has been accorded them by the failure of the president to give any orders to the architect or more lately to the superintendent of the capitol. If he should order that official to fly flags over the capitol at half mast and the order should be disobeyed, he would have power to dismiss him and appoint some one else in his place without the concurrence of either branch of congress, except so far as the appropriation for the official's salary would be involved. These are practically moot questions, but they occasionally form interesting subjects for fireside talks when flags are half masted in response to presidential proclamations.—Washington Star.

A Good Trick.

With some lycopodium powder the surface of a large or small vessel of water. You may then challenge any one to drop a piece of money into the water and declare that you will get it with the hand without wetting your skin. The lycopodium adheres to the hand and prevents its contact with the water. A little shake of your hand after the feat is over will dislodge the powder.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

EDITORIAL.

The question of a civil pension bill is being agitated in Washington to provide for superannuated clerks. If they include editors in the bill we will cheerfully advocate its adoption, otherwise we must say nay.

We have good news from Pittsburg for some of our Bellefonte friends. A French scientist has discovered a process for taking the headache out of wine. This will be a great boom to those who are too impecunious to afford two sizes of hats.

S. H. Irvin of Kentucky was defeated for re-election because he went to sleep and snored during the last session of Congress. This was a mistake on the part of the electors of his district for if lots more of our Congressmen would sleep sounder and snore louder the country would be better off.

We hear a great deal nowadays about watered stock on Wall street In order to break up this pernicious habit or custom we would suggest that the New York Town Town Council, send for the Bellefonte Water Committee, who will make the price of water so high that they cannot afford to use it on their stock.

We observe some of the admirers of Grover Cleveland are booming him for the next Democratic Presidential candidate. The boom thus far is in its incipiency. We hope it will develope into a great big boom. Would'nt Grover be a shining mark for the ballots of the working men. His free trade armor would afford little protection in the battle of ballots. Give us Grover by all means. He would be dead easy.

THIS IS A REPUBLICAN COUNTY.

The last election has demonstrated beyond a doubt, that Centre County is Republican by a safe majority, and hereafter if a Democrat is elected to any office, it will be done by the aid of Republicans.

In the official returns of the last election, Mr. Pattison had a majority of 393 votes which was due principally to the fact that he was particularly strong and had many friends among the farmers who not only voted, but worked in his interests, and besides there were many Republicans who were dissatisfied because Mr. Elkins was not nominated for Governor. These men cast their ballots for the Democratic candidate.

Mr. Dresser for Congress had a majority in the county over Mr. Hibner, Democrat, of 163, This was clearly a party vote, as neither of the candidates were citizens of our county and their campaign was made on purely political issues.

It is true Mr. Heinle, Democrat, had a majority of 675 but this was owing entirely to his great personal popularity. Capt. Taylor was successful on the same grounds, and Wetzel and Kepler owe their election to local causes.

In the vote for Auditor and Coroner, where there was no contest, and the vote was strictly partisan, the Republican majorities ran from 91 to 186. This is indisputable evidence that more Republican votes were cast than Democratic. The "stay at homes" were greater in number on our side than on the other, showing that with a full vote the Republicans have a clear majority of not less than 350.

In the face of this showing which cannot be controverted, there is no reason why in the future, every office in the County should not be filled by Republicans, and if a Democrat is elected it will be ourselves who do it.

The Democratic leaders know this, but are loath to acknowledge that their power has drifted from them. Instead of their majority being about 1500, as it was a few years ago, it has changed to the other side, and as a result, there is not the same eager rush for places on their ticket as heretofore. Their candidates are not so numerous as when a whole column of the Watchman would not hold the announcement cards, and a nomination was equivolent to an election.

Surely this is encouraging to us, and we should bend every effort to have it remain so. This can be done by looking after our party organization, by placing none but good men on our ticket next spring, honestly supporting them at the polls, and forgetting all past factional differences.

Let every Republican feel a personal responsibility in the success of our party, and do all in their power to advance its interests. If this is done we need not fear results.

The theory that "Everything comes to the man who waits" has been exploded, for proof of which, inquire of our friend Isaac Mitchell, the genial assistant cashier of Jackson, Hastings & Co. and he will tell you that in his experience at Tyrone last week, that there is such a thing as waiting too long if you want to catch a train.

The Standard Oil Company has declared the trifling dividend of 45 per cent. on their capital stock for the past year. No wonder they have advanced the price of oil. Is'nt it a fine thing for the people of the country that they don't control the supply of air, for if they did, none but millionaires would have any need of lungs.

What is the difference between brutality and sport? Brutality is where two men spar a few minutes with gloves and perhaps a small quantity of blood is shed. Sport is where twenty-two men slug and kick and jump on each other, tearing and smashing and killing.

Bryan is the only man who was ever known to make money and get rich running for President, and in order to increase his exchequer is trimming his sails to run again.

Entertainment by the Pupils of St. John's School.

The pupils of St. John's School will give an Entertainment in Garman's opera house on Friday evening Nov. 28th the proceeds to be used for the purpose of furnishing free books to the school.

We have received a program which we would be glad to publish, but owing to limited time, are not able to do so. In looking it over we discover a whole evening of pleasure for those who attend. The Sisters having charge of the school have devoted a vast amount of labor and patience in training those who are to take part and it promises to be one of the finest local entertainments ever given in Bellefonte. We bespeak the liberal patronage of our people. Let us give them a crowded house.

—The ladies of St. John's Catholic church will hold a Progressive euchre party in St. John's Hall this evening. Light refreshments will be served and an enjoyable evening is assured to all who attend. The admission is 25 cents.

—To-day the Academy football team which has not been scored on nor lost a game this season will play its last game with the strong College town team. The last contest between these two elevens was a most exciting one and ended in the small score of 2-0 in favor of the Academy. The College players are thirsting for victory but they will find themselves lined up against the strongest team the Academy has placed on the field this fall. Let every body turn out and encourage the boys. Admission 25 cents. Game called at 3 p. m.

—"Go Won Go Mohawk", the famous Indian actress who left so favorable an impression here last season when seen at Garman's opera house will again appear at that cosy little house for an engagement Saturday evening Nov. 29. She will as heretofore be seen in Lincoln J. Carter's interesting play "The Flaming Arrow." She will be supported by a large cast numbering some forty people and including the Government Indian Brass Band and the clever acting horses "Wongy" and "Buckskin". Both play and star are considered one of the season's novelties. A band concert will be given by the band in front of the theatre immediately before each performance.

—Ten thousand demons gnawing away at one's vitals couldn't be much worse than the tortures of itching piles. Yet there's a cure. Doan's Ointment never fails.

—Miss Anna Blanchard has been appointed agent for Daniel Gorman, the Williamsport florist. Mr. Gorman is the successor to Harry Chapel.

—Gen. Booth of the Salvation Army, after finishing his tour through the United States, makes the assertion that Chicago and New York are the wickedest cities in the world. We are glad that he did not visit Bellefonte, or he might have added, that with our slot machines and drunken brawls upon the streets, we are drifting in that direction ourselves. Bellefonte has always had the reputation of being one of the most moral towns in the state, but unless something is done in the line of reform, we will lose our good name.

Parlor matches are prohibited by law in New York City, which has been done at the instigation of the Insurance Companies, who consider them dangerous. Nothing is said concerning kitchen or dining room matches, so suppose they are the same there as in Bellefonte—perfectly harmless.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE GRANGE.

The Pennsylvania State Grange will hold its annual session in the city of Clearfield, December 9th to 12th, the meeting opening on Tuesday, Dec. 9th, at 2 p. m.

Every Subordinate Grange is entitled to two representatives: The Master and his wife. If they cannot go then the Grange can send any Fourth degree member who, with his wife, become the representatives.

The State Grange pays the actual railroad fare of its delegates. But every delegate must pay his own hotel expenses.

All the railroads of Pennsylvania will sell excursion tickets on card orders, which can be secured through J. T. Allman, Thompsontown, Pa., Secretary of the State Grange.

Arrangements have been made with hotels in Clearfield at rates of one dollar to two dollars per day, as may best suit the representatives.

To entitle the Subordinate grange to representation in the State grange the quarterly dues to the State grange must be paid in full to the end of the December quarter.

For detailed particulars of the arrangements of the Executive Committee for State grange write to the secretary, J. T. Allman, Thompsontown, Pa.

Every grange should take sufficient interest to see that it is properly represented at the annual meeting Dec 9th.

A Disreputable Affair.

Bellefonte contains quite a large population of colored people, most of whom are honest, industrious and good citizens, but there are others who are nothing but drunken, idle toughs. A few of the latter got on a jambaree last Saturday night and created a disturbance somewhere near the Brant House. Officer Mullen attempted to quiet them, when they turned upon him, and he was fortunate in escaping with his life, This crowd is among the most disreputable people that ever infested a respectable community, and have given an endless amount of trouble to the guardians of our peace.

Such conduct as indulged in on Saturday night, should not, nor it will not, be tolerated any longer. If it was the first offence, it might be overlooked, but it is a continual occurrence, and we call upon those in authority to inflict the full penalty of the law upon these persons who are continually disturbing the peace of our town,

As a result of Saturday night's affray the following arrests were made and the culprits gave bail for their appearance at a hearing before Justice Keichline next Saturday: Jim Delige, Billy Green, Sallie Green, Bob. Green, Jennie Green and Mrs. William Green. The charge preferred against them being disorderly drunkenness and interferring with an officer while in the discharge of his duty. This is a case in which all law abiding citizens are interested and no compromise with the offenders should be permitted. It is bad enough to have drunken men parade our streets making the night hideous with their cursing and fighting but when it comes to women, it is disgusting, and we hope that such punishment will be meeted out to these law breakers, that it will be the last time we will be called upon to say anything on the subject. Since writing the above we understand an effort is being made to have this breach of the peace "fixed up" as has been done in the past. and we call upon our good law abiding citizens to stand by us, if they do, we promise to do our utmost to bring the matter before Judge and Jury.

Will Advance Freight Rates.

To meet the increased cost in operating expenses by reason of the recent advance in wages, the Pennsylvania railroad and other leading lines will advance freight rates on January 1, 1903, and preparations to that end are already under way. This statement was made by an official connected with the freight department of the Pennsylvania railroad.

The advance is expected to apply only to commodity rates, the present classified rates to remain undisturbed. The commodity rates are those applying to bulk freights, like coal, coke, iron and steel products, stone, brick and kindred freights, and grain and its products. What the advance will be has not been determined upon, and it was stated that no conference had been held on the subject, but that a number of them would probably be held before the advance is made.

— ary the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McClellan, of East Lamb street fell on Monday evening and broke her right arm near the wrist. The little one is getting along as well as can be expected.

Next Spring, the citizens of Bellefonte, will elect a Tax Collector and Treasurer. Both these offices carry with them large salaries, and at the present time are held by Democrats. This should not be. Let us look around and select good Republican candidates and they will be elected. What is the use of giving the Democrats the best that is going?

Why, Oh, Why?

At the prompting of our physicians a scare has been started in town which has resulted in a general vaccination of the inhabitants, especially of the young. To assist in making this effective stories were started that school children who had not a certificate from a reputable physician that they were vaccinated were to be excluded from the schools and churches, the result of which was many stayed away from Sunday school and church and the doctors reaped a rich harvest. It is said that some made as much as $100 in a day. It was claimed that this was in the interest of the health of the people, to save them from contracting a dangerous and loathsome disease.

This effort to preserve the health of our people was indeed most praisworthy. Do not the Board of Health and our local officers know that our spring is being defiled, that source of health given by God himself for the comfort and happiness of our people; that a dead dog was found in the reservoir in an advanced stage of decomposition; that a dead cat had layed in the gutter of our main street for four days before it was removed; that on Thomas street the sink water is emptied by surface drains into the gutters to lay for days and weeks, a death-dealing menace to the people, and that cases of typhoid fever have developed there, a disease as fatal, and as far as Bellefonte is concerned more deadly than small pox? Don't our doctors know that the two diseases mentioned are filth diseases and can be prevented by perfect cleanliness; that if the town is kept perfectly clean all these diseases can be eradicated? Why, then, does the effort to preserve human life end with vaccination, and why do our doctors and health officers lay themselves open to the suspicion of being moved by mercenary motives? * * *

Death of T. H. Akers.

T. H. Akers, formerly of Bellefonte, but late of Huntingdon, died at his home in that place Wednesday evening of paralysis, aged 66 years. He was the well known representative of the Union Central Life Insurance Company.

Timothy Hickson Akers was born at Akersville, Pa., October 21, 1837. For eighteen years past he had been general agent for the Union Central Life Insurance company, the main office of which is in Cincinnati. He was married to Miss Martha J. Mills, who survives him as do also four daughters: Mrs. O. C. Mordoif, of Brooklyn; Mrs. O. C. Wells and Mrs. D. R. Patton, of Huntingdon; and Miss Jessie R. Akers, at home. Rev. Jesse R. Akers, of Huntingdon, is a brother. Deceased was a member of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Huntingdon, a good business man and one who had many friends.

The funeral took place from the family residence in Huntingdon at 2 o'clock, Saturday afternoon. The interment was made in the Huntingdon cemetery.

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL GRANGE.

The recent meeting of the National Grange, in the City of Lansing, Michigan was an unusually large and successful gathering. Over eight hundred members were honored with the degree of Ceres, which is the highest degree in the Order.

From the reports of the representatives, from the different states, the farmers are taking greater interest in the grange movements.

The report of the Secretary, Dr. John Trimble, showed a large increase in the member of granges 256 having organized with a large addition to the membership.

There is a fascination about big profits to a business man. But the conservative and cautious trader prefers to have the lesser per cent. of interest and the larger per cent. of safety in his investments There is no business man who would not consider it a sound proposition to invest in an enterprise in which absolute loss was impossible and which offered ninety-eight chances in a hundred of a rich profit. The statistics of cures effected by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery show that ninety-eight per cent. of cases of "weak lungs" can be absolutely cured. Almost if not all forms of physical weakness may be traced to starvation Starvation saps the strength. The body is just as much starved when the stomach cannot extract nutrition from the food it receives as when there is no food. "Weak lungs"—bronchial affections, obstinate coughs, call for nourishment. "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies that nourishment in its most condensed and assimilable form. It makes "weak lungs" strong, by strengthening the stomach and organs of digestion which digest and distribute the food, and by increasing the supply of pure blood.

HER FRENCH A FAILURE.

She was spending her first month in the Latin quarter of Paris. She spoke English fluently, with a Boston accent; also she spoke German, could make a fair stagger at Italian and knew a few words of Hindoostanee, but of French not a syllable.

One morning she found herself in a wrestling match with a bottle of French shoe blacking. The pesky bottle, understanding that it had to deal with an alien, refused to give up its cork. She had no corkscrew of her own and did not know how to ask for one, even if she dared suspect that her next door neighbor might be possessed of the luxury. The tine of her pet fork she had bent on the obstinate plug, the point of her best penknife she had broken off short, and nothing remained except to throw the bottle out of a window to get at its contents. She decided as a last resort to try breaking the neck off the bottle. With a "stove lid lifter" she administered several cautious taps in the region of the jugular of the obstinate neck. "Nothin' doin'." Then she tapped harder still, and the blacking came. All over her fingers it came, all over her light woolen skirt and over much of the floor and window sill.

She decided to have the skirt cleaned and, packing it into a bundle, tripped off to an establishment where she found embarrassment because she could not understand questions. Finally she got the drift of the conversation. The cleaners wanted to know what had caused the spot. Fortunately a bottle of shoe blacking was standing near by, and she pointed at this and "ouid" and "ouid" until she left in heightened spirits, feeling that she was not helpless and that she had made the cleaners understand. When the skirt was duly returned the following week, it was dyed black.—New York Tribune.

ANIMAL ODDITIES.

Breton sheep are not much larger than a fair sized hare.

The mandarin duck is one of the most beautiful of aquatic birds.

The queen is always at the mercy of the bees and is a slave instead of a ruler.

A beetle one-third the size of a horse would be able to pull against more than a dozen horses.

The greyhound, which can cover a mile in a minute and twenty-eight seconds, is the fastest of quadrupeds.

The giraffe, armadillo and porcupine have no vocal cords and are therefore mute. Whales and serpents are also voiceless.

The glowworm lays eggs which are themselves luminous. However, the young hatched from them are not possessed of those peculiar properties until after the first transformation.

To escape from dangers which menace them starfishes commit suicide. This instinct of self destruction is found only in the highest and lowest scales of animal life.

The Coming Winter.

A local sportsman says that the winter will be a severe one. He bases his prognostications on the fact that the hide of the squirrels is so thick this fall that it can hardly be cut with a knife. He says he has hunted for a good many years and has yet failed to see that when a squirrels hide is thick and tough a severe winter follows.

But the other prophets say that the winter which is soon to make its bow, will be mild and warm that there will be no sleighing, but fat and prosperous grave yards, the accompaniment of an open winter, will everywhere be present. There will be no ice cut except by the smart set, and that picnics will be held under the shade of pine trees next January. These hot winter prophets also have signs that cannot be denied.

Walt Whitman's Prige.

Whitman's grandmother was a Quaker, and the bard had been all his life used, Quaker fashion, to sitting in the house with his sombrero on if it suited him to do so. One day, with a friend, he entered the gloomy and half empty precincts of Trinity church, New York, and took a back seat in the obscurity and for a moment forgot to remove his hat or was probably just about to do so when an officious verger stepped up and requested him to take it off.

Walt, a man of immense pride, not seeing fit to do so instantaneously or being very slow in his mental processes, was taking the matter into consideration for a second when the verger knocked the offending hat off his head. Walt picked up the huge felt and, doubling it together, smote the fellow vigorously twice or thrice with it on the head and slowly left the church, the red faced sexton following and threatening him with the law.—Boston Transcript.

Crosses and Thieves.

Several years after the close of the civil war a reception was held in Lynchburg, Va., to commemorate some national event, says V. Halsey in Lippincott's Magazine. Many men were there assembled who had fought in the war. Among them was a major of a Massachusetts regiment, who, meeting General Jubal Early of the Confederate army, cordially greeted him.

Pointing to his own decorations, the major said, "Ah, general, you see we have all the crosses now."

"Yes," replied the old general. "In olden times they hung thieves on crosses. Now they hang crosses on thieves."

The Missionary's Ruse.

Cannibal King—Bring on the big griddle and let's roast this fellow.

Captured Missionary—O King, but give me a dose of quinine before I die! You see, I am a victim of the habit. I consume three ounces of quinine every 24 hours.

Cannibal King—I pass this fellow up. I can still taste that quinine fiend we roasted two months ago. Ugh!—Ohio State Journal.

Deceased was born in Philadelphia and had he lived until next April would have been 62 years of age. During the civil war he served his country faithfully as a soldier but we could not learn what regiment he belonged to. He engaged in different business pursuits but of late years ill health has compelled him to lead a retired life.

CERTAIN RESULTS.

'Nothing Can Be Surer,' is the Testimony of Bellefonte Citizens.

The stage of uncertainty is over in Bellefonte. There can now be had plenty of positive proof in the testimony of a citizen. Evidence of this nature should convince the most skeptical doubter in this vicinity. Read the following:

Mr. Curtis Johnson, of 583 Bishop street, freight truckman, says:

"I had backache and lameness across my loins for a year or more. At times the lameness was so acute I could lift nothing and if I stooped it was impossible for me to straighten. When driving there was a steady aching over my kidneys the whole time and I had a dull, tired feeling which took away all my ambition. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from F. Potts Green's drug store and they soon cured me from the whole combination of troubles and they did it quickly and thoroughly. My wife was also suffering from a tired, grinding backache and she used Doan's Kidney Pills and they invigorated her generally. She now speaks of them as highly as I do. We never came across any remedy which surpassed Doan's Kidney Pills."

A JAPANESE DINNER.

HOW THE DISTASTEFUL FOOD IS SERVED AND EATEN.

Squatting Before Tables Six Inches High, One Wrestles With Chopsticks and Tiny Bowls, the While Waited Upon by Barefooted Maids.

To an American given to stiff joints and corpulency a Japanese dinner is a tedious experience, especially when he's used to business lunches and the like. But it is worth trial and discomfiture if one is fortunate enough to be the guest of a rich man, for in Japan hospitality is one of the cardinal virtues.

Western customs and usages have found their way into many homes of the wealthy, whose dinners and lunches are the counterpart of those with which we are all familiar. But a real Japanese dinner, including chopsticks, lacquer trays and tiny cups, is a thing never to be forgotten.

Japanese houses are made up of sliding screens instead of our solid partitions and in summer are all left open, so that, seated at dinner, one looks out over the gardens, seeing the lights of the city in the distance, and the scent of a thousand flowers blows in with every breath of air.

The guests remove their shoes on entering the house and, except when provided with a pair of cotton overshoes, must spend the evening in stocking feet unless happily the host has an extra pair. The wife of a Japanese gentleman does not preside at his table unless there are ladies in the party, but appears with the tea and sweetmeats, which always precede a dinner, as do our cocktails and sherry, etc. She merely greets the guests and appears again only when the goodbys are said.

Silken cushions are scattered about the floor and the guests are arranged according to rank, for the Japanese are, of course, great sticklers for form and ceremony. Little tables, some six inches high, are placed before each one and barefooted waiting maids in graceful and prettily tinted kimonos bring in lacquer trays with several tiny covered bowls.

Before leaving the trays on the tables they set them on the floor, and, dropping on their knees, make their best bow, touching their foreheads to the floor. Chopsticks take the place of knives and forks; but, unlike our weapons of attack, are made of wood. They are never used twice, unless family heirlooms, when they are of carved ivory of the most exquisite workmanship, as are also the lacquer trays, bowls and cups.

The host sets an example by removing the covers from the tiny bowls, and the guest, doing likewise, finds an assortment of food quite new and generally most distasteful. Mustering up much skill one attempts getting the food on chopsticks from the tables to one's mouth. The first few times most of it falls on the floor or on one's lap. The wretched sticks wabble and cross each other as if focused. When almost desperate, the good host is apt to come to the rescue by suggesting lifting the bowls, and, with the aid of a chopstick, shoveling the food in, as one would potatoes into a barrel.

In each course there are half a dozen dishes, and the host tells what they are. First, suimono, a bean soup; kuchitori, chestnuts boiled and crushed into a mush; kamaboko, fish picked fine and rolled into little balls and baked; sashimi, raw fish cut into thin slices and covered with ice. This is dipped into rich sauce called soy, and is really very good. Little cups of sharm sake, the native brandy made of rice, are served with each course. Napkins and bread are unknown quantities.

The second course is a small fish boiled whole. One has a chance here to get in some fine play with the chopsticks—umani, bits of fowl boiled with potatoes or lotus roots, a salad of onions, peas and string beans, with a few leaves of lettuce; sunomono, sea snails served with eggplant mashed, and chaman mushi, a thick soup made of fish and vegetables, with mushrooms for a relish.

The third course is a curry of rice and picked vegetables, and for a fourth and final course you have sobo, a sort of buckwheat vermicelli served with soy and a sweet liquor called mirin; shiruko, rice cakes, seaweed and confectionery of all sorts, which are very sweet and tasteless.

During the dinner each guest rises and proposes the health of the host and one other guest until the whole party is disposed of. This custom is rather hard on the guests, for sake is fiery stuff and goes to one's head more quickly than our own brandy. To make matters worse, after one has drunk the health of all the company it is customary to drink the health of the waitresses, who bow their foreheads to the floor in acknowledgment.

At the close of a dinner the tabako bon, a tray holding a hibachi with live coals in a cone of ashes and a section of bamboo for an ash receiver, is put before each guest, and cigars and cigarettes are passed around. tabs of velvet are finished with tiny buttons or little bows or buckles. Where lace is employed it is usually left transparent or lined with color. Ecru or ficelle lace is popular over white satin, and a tracery of black chenille running over the light colored lace is quite the height of the mode.

Evening blouses are not very decollete, and many have the necks wholly or partly covered with transparent lace. Choux of colored velvet, crape or chiffon are liberally used, but placed more at the center than at the left side. Embroidered galon is inlet in the fashion of lace on heavy gowns.

A thoroughly up to date gown is the one in the cut. It is trimmed with strappings of lighter shade. The hat is of white felt, trimmed to correspond.

the shape what it may, flatness is the marked characteristic of the hats of the moment. Felt, smooth and hairy, and the fluffy silk beavers play an important part, but moire cloth and velvet, especially white, hold their own.

Feathers assume a new aspect. Bird of paradise plumes are fashioned into bows and loops and into cockades and aigrets.

Large flat hats after the Lamballe order are much worn. Some of the crowns are of white cloth, some of white moire. Drawn louisine hats are another novelty.

Large hats are made of sable and gray squirrel. They are trimmed with tabs of bright colored velvets.

THE WINE EXPERT.

HE MUST BE AS TEMPERATE AS AN ATHLETE IN TRAINING.

By Sight, Smell and Taste He Tests the Quality of Liquors and Hence He Must Lead a Life at Once Rigorous and Ascetic.

Many hotels and restaurants of importance as well as many wholesale and retail liquor dealing firms employ a wine expert. It is the duty of this man to pass upon the quality of all wines, brandies, whiskies and other alcoholic beverages handled by his house. He works with an empty stomach, and he makes his tests through the three senses of sight, which tests the spirit's color and clarity; smell, which tests its odor, and taste, the most important sense, which tests its flavor. To keep these senses at once delicate and sharp the expert must not use tobacco, and in the use of liquors he must be temperate to the point of teetotalism.

If two glasses of champagne are set before a clever wine expert, one a champagne of the vintage of 1864, the other of the vintage of 1888, he will tell readily which is which. There are indeed a half dozen vintages which he can designate by their taste alone without the helpful presence of the labeled bottle.

The wine expert must also have a profound knowledge of red wines. Among the red wines of France he must be able to tell those of the Garonne from those of Burgundy and of Dauphiny.

In the white wines also he must be learned, and he should have no difficulty in distinguishing the champagnes of Sillery, of Ay, of Reims and of Epernay and in distinguishing also their best vintages. Among the other French white wines he must know those of Sauterne, Barsac, Preignac and Bommes. And the Spanish white wines of Xeres, the German white wines of Johannisberg, Steinberg and Hockheim must be like old time friends.

Whiskies and brandies are divisions of his work that are as important as the wines. He must tell at a glance whether a brandy has been aged in wood or in glass, and he must not only separate with ease the Irish, the Scotch and the American whiskies, but he even must designate the districts in which each was distilled.

Considering his knowledge the salary of the wine expert is not great. It averages $40 a week. Occasionally it falls as low as $25, and occasionally it mounts to munificence.

The expert must not eat rich, heavy foods and pastries. He must not keep late hours. His life, in a word, must be as temperate as that of an athlete in training. This is in order that his senses of sight and taste and smell may be at their best always. Smoking is bad for the smell; rich foods are bad for the taste; late hours or any sort of dissipation, even the mildest, is bad for the health generally and for all the senses, sight in particular; hence the rigorous and ascetic life of the wine expert.

The wine expert works with stomach empty, for then his taste and smell are at their keenest. He works on bright days only in a room flooded with sunlight, for then he can best weigh a liquor's color and lucidity. He uses glasses of the oddest shapes—a different glass almost for every liquor—for these help him to distinguish the most delicate gradations of smell and color. The brandy glass, for instance, has a bowl almost as big as a washbowl. The bottom of this bowl the brandy covers in the thinnest layer. The expert puts his face down close and, with his nose inside the bowl, rolls the brandy about, thus getting the full bouquet of the liquor.

He must never swallow the beverages he tests. He holds them in his mouth about a minute, rolling them upon his tongue and letting them touch his palate, and that is sufficient for an accurate judgment. To swallow them would not aid him, for there are no nerves of taste in the stomach. To swallow them would, on the contrary, hinder him, sending him drunk to bed each testing day.

The expert of a large and fashionable New York hotel in discussing the other day his business said:

"What is more difficult than to describe in words the taste of anything? How, for instance, would you say what bread tastes like or meal or potatoes?

"But red wines have, after all, a definable taste. The poor red wines are earthy. They have a flavor of fresh soil. The good ones taste like field mushrooms, and the best ones taste like truffles. But the taste of whiskies and brandies and white wines is not to be defined in any such concrete way as this.

"The wine science is a nice one. Few men know it. Few men indeed can tell with their eyes shut whisky from brandy or ale from beer. Few men who use liquor even know the wines that custom demands should be drunk with a dinner at which wine is served."

When asked what those wines were, he said:

"Sauterne with the oysters, sherry with the soup, Rhine wine with the fish, claret with the roast, champagne with the game, salad and dessert and cognac with the coffee."—New York Tribune.

An Essay on Rain.

"In a general way I approve of rains," said the grumpy person when he reached home after a drenching. "It wouldn't be so bad," he resumed as he took his shoes off and let the water run out, "if it rained straight down, but when it rains zigzag and up and crosswise and catacorners it's time to protest. A dod gasted day like this has no right to be on the calendar"—and so on until he got to bed.—Exchange.

FACTS ABOUT FEET.

The typical Irish foot is flat, rather broad and not usually long.

The Frenchman's foot is proverbially long, narrow and well proportioned.

The Scotchman's foot is high and thick, strong, muscular and capable of hard work.

The Tartar's foot is short and heavy, the foot of a certain type of savage, and the toes are all the same length.

The Englishman's foot is in most cases short and rather fleshy and not as a rule as strong as proportionately it should be.

The Russian's foot possesses at least one peculiarity which is worth noticing. The toes are generally "webbed" to the first joint.

The Spaniard's foot is generally small and, thanks to the Moorish blood which flows in the veins of most Spaniards, elegantly curved.

The latest measurements seem to show that America is in the process of developing a race with the smallest feet among all the civilized nations.

The Teutonic and Scandinavian nations appear to have the largest feet, Swedes, Norwegians and Germans standing in this respect at the head of the list.

The Arab's foot is famous for its high arch, whereby a true Arab may, indeed, always be known, the Koran saying that a stream of water can run under the foot without touching it.

CONCERNING CALENDARS.

Some Interesting Ones Date as Far Back as the Fourth Century.

Among the Greeks and Romans almanacs or calendars were not written for the general public, but were preserved as part of the esoteric learning of the priests, whom the people had to consult not only for the dates of the festivals, but for the proper times when various legal proceedings might be instituted. About 300 B. C., however, one Encius Flavius, secretary to Appius Claudius, stole these secrets by repeated applications to the priests and collated the information so gained. It was really publishing an almanac when, as Livy relates, Flavius exhibited the tasti on white tables around the forum. From this time similar tablets containing the calendar, the festivals, astronomical phenomena and sometimes allusions to historical events became quite common. They have been dug up in Pompeii and elsewhere.

There are also extant Christian calendars dating as far back as the fourth century, which give the names of the saints and other religious information.

One of the most famous of the calendars of the middle ages is that compiled by Petrus of Dacia in A. D. 1300. A manuscript copy is preserved in the Savilian library at Oxford. The Symbolical Man or Man of Signs (Homo Signorum), still a common feature in almanacs, appears in this book, not, it is conjectured, for the first time, as it seems to have been a survival from the time of Ptolemy's "Almagest," a collection of classic observations and problems relating to geometry and astronomy.

The first printed almanac was the "Pro Pluribus Annis," issued at Vienna in 1457 by an astronomer named Purbach. The earliest known almanac devoted expressly to the year of issue was published by Rabelais in 1533.

Thenceforth the ephemeral yearly character of the publication came to be definitely recognized by almanac makers. Nostradamus set the fashion of incorporating predictions of coming events into almanacs, a fashion that has continued to this day in all purely astrological brochures of this sort despite intermittent efforts to suppress it by royal authority in France and elsewhere.—Era.

A Little Child's Loneliness.

Little Mabel, says the Woman's Journal, had been put to bed alone. Presently she appeared in her nightgown at the head of the stairs, saying plaintively, "I'm lonesome!" Her mother gave her a favorite rubber doll named Happy to take to bed with her and for a few minutes she was quiet. Then she reappeared with her plaint of lonesomeness. This time her mother reminded her that God was with her and sent her back to bed with a reproof. Soon she was heard weeping bitterly, and when her mother went to her little Mabel summed up her sense of misery by exclaiming, "I don't want Happy, and I don't want God; I want somebody with a skin face!"

"But surely, Bridget, you won't leave me so suddenly? You must ask him to wait for a few days."

"Oh, I couldn't, mum."

"Why not, pray?"

"Sure, mum, I'd like to oblige you, but I don't feel well enough acquainted with him to ask such a thing."—Philadelphia Press.

General Horace Porter, the American soldier, once asked Li Hung Chang for his photograph for his daughter. The Chinese statesman kindly complied with his request and, getting his paint pot and pencil, drew queer looking figures up and down the portrait. When he reached home, Porter gave the photograph to his little girl, saying: "Here's what you wanted. If you can't read it, probably you can play it on the piano!"

When a woman is nervous her imagination gives fantastic and threatening shapes to the most familiar objects. By day she starts in fear at every sudden or unfamiliar sound. By night the furniture of her room takes on affrighting forms of ghost or goblin. You can't reason with the nerves. Neither logic nor love can quiet them. They must be nourished and then the outcry of the nerves will cease as naturally as a hungry child ceases to cry when fed.

For nervous women there is no better tonic and nervine than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures the diseases which produce nervousness in women, irregularity, debilitating drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite, and induces refreshing sleep.

"When I began taking your medicine I was not able to stand on my feet ten minutes at a time," writes Mrs. Hattie Borradaile, of 113 Spring Street, Nashville, Tenn. "Had falling of uterus, and kidney and liver disease, and was so weak and nervous I could not keep still. Would take nervous spells and almost die at times. I had several different doctors attending, but they could not do me any good. The last one I had said I would never get up again. Told him that I was taking your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and he said, 'Might just as well take that much water each day.' But I thought I would give the medicine a fair trial. Before I had finished the first two bottles I was able to get outside the house and walk around the yard. I kept on taking the medicines and they cured me."

SPOKE FOUR TIMES.

President Roosevelt and General Wright Were big Atiractions at Memphis.

WAS LATTER'S HOME COMING

There Was a Parade and Several Receptions During the Day and an Elaborate Banquet Wednesday Night.

NEGROES VERY ENTHUSIASTIC

MEMPHIS, Tenn., November 20.—Although the festivities yesterday celebrated the home-coming of General Luke E. Wright, it is no reflection of the warmth of the welcome extended him to say that President Roosevelt's visit was the overshadowing feature of the day. Excursion trains were run into the city and a number of distinguished people were present to participate in the celebration. Among them were Governor Benton McMillan and General Joseph Wheeler. The programme was a long one.

After the president's arrival there was a parade through the streets to the Gayoso hotel, where a breakfast was tendered the president and General Wright jointly by the ladies of Memphis. In the afternoon the president attended and spoke at two receptions given in honor of General Wright, one at the Auditorium by white citizens, the other at a hall in the black section of the city by colored people. Later there was a Colonial Dames tea at the Gayoso, and the festivities closed last night with an elaborate banquet, at which the president delivered a speech. Including some brief remarks at the breakfast, the president spoke four times during the day. Altogether it was a splendid tribute to the affection in which General Wright is held at home. That Mrs. Wright is also exceedingly popular was made apparent by the applause which greeted every reference to her. This was especially marked at the Auditorium, when the president referred to the fact that his mother's brother served in the confederate navy under her father, who was Admiral Semmes.

Mayor Williams and Governor McMillan made addresses of welcome and the audience was very enthusiastic when General Wright delivered his response. He was greatly touched by the compliment paid him by the president's presence and with the demonstration in his honor.

President Roosevelt had not intended to speak at this reception, but in response to the insistance of the assemblage he addressed them briefly. The reception tendered by the colored people was truly remarkable. General Wright earned their undying gratitude during the two yellow fever epidemics twenty years ago by remaining here when most of the whites had fled, and seeing that the sick was cared for. The hall was packed, galleries and pit, to the point of suffocation with the whole spirit of the proceedings breathed admiration for their friend.

General Wright, in addressing the colored audience, talked chiefly of their future, telling them of the difficult problems before them. He said it would perhaps have been better for both races had the change from slavery to citizenship not came so suddenly.

The president's reception beggars description. The colored people became almost frantic, jumping up and down in their enthusiasm and yelling themselves hoarse. The president's address gave the negroes the highest degree of pleasure.

At the conclusion of the president's speech the entire audience united in singing "God be with you till we meet again."

George F. Hoy, of Hublersburg, was a heavy dealer in apples this season. From August 25 to November 20 Mr. Hoy had two men going through the valleys buying the fruit. Seventy-four cars were required to ship these apples, and the sum of $9,500 was paid the farmers for the fruit.

Mr. Hoy states that the public generally believed that the apples went to Pittsburg, but this belief is wrong, as not one car load was billed to that city.

Following the ceremony a most sumptuous wedding dinner was served which was highly enjoyed by all present.

Many beautiful presents both useful and costly were received by the bride which amply attests to the high esteem in which she is held. The groom as we stated above is a son of Capt. Bennison, well known all over Centre county. He is a most worthy young man and this paper joins with the many friends in tendering heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a happy and prosperous future, both for himself and bride.

SAD ACCIDENT AT STATE COLLEGE

John Kline, Aged 16, Met His Death While Hunting.

On Wednesday afternoon about 5:00 o'clock a sad accident occurred at State College which resulted in the almost instant death of a young man of that place named John Kline. The particulars of the sad affair are about as follows:

John and a young friend named Elliott Sowers were out hunting for rabbits on James I. Thompson's farm below town. Kline was slightly in advance of Sowers when in some unaccountable manner the latter's gun was discharged and the load penetrated Kline's body on the right side just above the thigh.

Dr. John Robinson and Phil Shed, both of State College, were hunting in the woods near by and hearing the shot hastened to the scene. They did everything they could for the unfortunate young man, but death ensued in a few minutes.

The shooting was purely accidental and Sowers was simply crazed with grief over the tragic event. It is explained that the gun was set at half-cock, but there was something wrong with the trigger and the least jar would set it off.

The remains were at once taken to the home of his grief-stricken parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kline, at State College, where they were prepared for burial.

John Kline was born at State College and was sixteen years of age. He is survived by his parents and one sister, Mrs. Edward Erb, of North Spring street, Bellefonte.

The dead boy was a member of the Methodist church and a most exemplary youth.

The funeral took place last Friday morning at 10 o'clock, Rev. Heckman, of the Methodist church, officiating. The interment will be made in the Branch cemetery, a short distance from where he met his death.

The large church building was crowded with an appreciative audience to listen to this lecture which is so full of interest and which gives such a fine conception of the manner in which that solemn and celebrated drama is produced.

Judge Furst delivered this lecture at the earnest solicitation of Dr. W. D. Roberts, pastor of the church, and the speaker received the encomiums of every one present.

A QUEER PICTURE THING.

Few chapters in the world's history are more curious and interesting than that which deals with the fortunes of its art treasures. In the cathedral at Montreal is, or was a few years ago, a large piece of tapestry which had been discovered in a back street of a New England town. The story is told in Mrs. Silsbee's "Half Century of Salem."

One day a certain Mr. Miller passing through Derby street saw a woman beating clouds of dust from a carpet. Something peculiar in its appearance made him stop and look closely at it, when he discovered, to his astonishment, that it was a splendid piece of tapestry, with life sized figures wrought from Raphael's cartoon, "Feed My Lambs."

The woman was quite willing to tell how she obtained it. It was, in fact, a standing grievance to her. Her husband was a sailor, and when he went out on one of his voyages she had begged him to bring her a carpet for her best room. As it happened, he did not visit a port where he could buy a carpet, but rolled up in a little shop on the quay at Malta he had found the tapestry and purchased it, thinking it might answer the purpose. It was too large for the room, and the woman had to turn a big piece under. She folded the piece back, revealing part of the superb border of fruit and flowers, wrought in silk and gold thread, as fresh as when it was first worked. But the owner eyed it with contempt. She never did like the queer picture thing, she declared.

It was the opportunity of a lifetime. Mr. Miller promptly offered her the choice of any carpet in the stores in exchange for her "queer picture thing," and the woman as promptly accepted the offer. They went downtown together, and she selected, with unbounded delight, a hideous pattern of glowing reds and greens. Her face was full of triumph when she returned. The best room at last was to have a carpet that was a carpet!

It is safe to say that no bargain ever gave more complete satisfaction to both parties than the one made that morning in Derby street, Salem.

A GREAT WORRY CURE.

Common Sense Is the Best Remedy That Can Be Prescribed.

I once asked a physician what cure he could suggest for the worrying habit. "I would prescribe common sense," he said, "and if a man or woman hasn't got a stock on hand and cannot cultivate one the medical man is powerless." This worrying nonsense grows. The best means to cure it lies in the hands of the woman herself.

If she will just call a little horse sense to her aid, resolve not to borrow trouble, to be cheerful and think upon the right side of things, she will live longer and be able to retain her beauty. Every woman has the strongest desire to keep her good looks. Why, then, does she take the course which is sure to make her yellow skinned, dull eyed and thoroughly unlovely?

The Englishwoman is greatly admired for her utter refusal to worry or to be worried. Consequently she looks young at fifty. Undertaking no more than she can comfortably carry out and firmly believing in the coming of another day, she does not procrastinate, but simply will not let the domestic machinery grind her down to ill health and an early old age.

She is a frequent bather and regards health as the prime factor of life, to be looked after before everything else. She sleeps nine hours and also takes a nap during the day, arranging her work in the most systematic manner.

Her little memorandum slip always shows two vacant hours—they are for rest. She eats heartily, but of the most digestible food, and would rather have a mouthful of good food and go partly hungry than eat a whole meal of cheaper things.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Thumb Nail Pictures.

In collections, centuries old, to be seen in both China and Japan are specimens of the most remarkable drawings in the world, pictures of all kinds drawn with the thumb nail. The nails of the thumbs on the left hands of the artists of these are allowed to grow to an enormous length, sometimes to a foot or eighteen inches, and are then pared down to a pen shaped point. Dipping this oddly constructed pen in beautiful vermilion or sky blue ink, the only kinds of ink used in these sacred thumb nail drawings, the artist gracefully outlines his work.

Occasionally the bold touches from the studio of a master in this department of "high art" are life size and are sketched by a few sweeps of the artist's arm. Like other pictures and sketches of the orient, these sacred thumb nail pictures are mounted and rolled up like scrolls.

Some Words.

According to the late Richard A. Proctor, says the London Chronicle, the phrase "I guess," to English ears so ridiculous, is really identical with the old expression, "I wis," meaning "I know." The word "guess" has changed its meaning entirely in England, but has partly preserved it in America, where of course the native says "I guess" when he is more or less in a state of certainty. There are many other examples of words that have played fast and loose with "g" and "w," such as "guardian" and "warden," "guard" and "ward," "guichet" and "wicket."

Coeducation.

"Do you believe in coeducation?"

"Not much. There is usually too much 'co' and too little 'education.'"—New York World.

AN ALL-ROUND TONIC.

So many splendid cures have been made in purely nervous affections by Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills, people are apt to lose sight of the fact that they are a magnificent blood and general tonic. They give to every organ the power to work, to do its duty as it should—to the blood a richness in quanity and quality no other medicine can—appetite digestion, strength—all are furnished by their tonic powee. To the system at large they give a general feeling of vigorous, robust health.

DANVILLE Pa.

Mrs. Jacob Mills of Cor. Front and Church streets, Danville, Pa., says:—"Last fall I was feeling very poorly and nervous. I had frequent spells of nervous headache and a good deal of trouble with my stomach. Seeing Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills recommended. I got a box and used them with good results. I rested so much better and felt stronget and brighter. They certainly did me good and I can recommend them."

I was threatened with a nervous prostration—my nerves were weak appetite poor and my sleep broken at night, leaving me tired day times. By advice I tried the Nerve Pills, and found in them what I needed, a good reliable nerve tonic. They gave me steadiness of nerves, restful sleep, good digestion and physical strength and energy. I can recommend them to anyone."

Eczema

How it reddens the skin, itches, oozes, dries and scales!

Some people call it tetter, milk crust or salt rheum.

The suffering from it is sometimes intense; local applications are resorted to—they mitigate, but cannot cure.

It proceeds from humors inherited or acquired and persists until these have been removed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

positively removes them, has radically and permanently cured the worst cases, and is without an equal for all cutaneous eruptions.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic. Price 25 cents.

JOHN C. MILLER.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

—J. Linn Harris is seriously ill with pneumonia at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Harris on Linn street.

—John Sechler, of Milesburg, has been placed as third brakeman on the yard crew, at this place. The traffic is getting so extensive that it was thought advisable to enlarge the crew.

—John Henry, the bright little son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Irwin, of Altoona, died on Saturday morning of diphtheria. Mr. and Mrs. Irwin have the sympathy of their many Bellefonte friends.

—Rev. Inglis the evangelist preached to a large congregation in the United Brethren church Sunday morning. In the afternoon he held a Bible Reading and in the evening preached in Petrikin Hall.

—Mrs. Bridget Bradley widow of John Bradley and a former resident of this place died at Spangler on Friday aged about 73 years. The remains were brought here Manday noon and taken to the Catholic cemetery where interment was made.

—Some fellow who evidently knows what he is talking about says that it takes a rich man to draw a check, a pretty girl to draw attention, a horse to draw a cart, a porous plaster to draw the skin, a toper to draw a cork, a free lunch to draw a crowd and an advertisement in the REPUBLICAN to draw custom.

Kerbaugh, who are building a new double track line for the Pennsylvania on the old State Railroad which was known as the New Portage, in blasting on Monday unearthed a tumble-down "jigger" cabin, a place where fifty years ago whisky was sold to laborers at a penny a glass. In a cabin around a whiskey barrel stamped "Snowberger, 1854." There was about six inches of gelatinous subtance in the bottom something like the "mother" of vinegar. The laborers on the Old and New Portage and on the Pennsylvania Canal were greatly troubled with malaria and chills, and in order to ward off the attacks they partook regularly of whiskey, which was then very cheap probably a "levy"—twelve and one-half cents— a quart. At first it was free to the workmen and there was a man whose business was to distribute the drink, and who was called the "jigger boss." The Electric Light Company Raise Prices.

The Electric Light Company, following the example of the Steam Heat Company, has raised the price of that commodity twenty per cent. to take effect December 1st.

We are not surprised at their action in doing so, for as every one is aware the price of coal has advanced at least one hundred per cent within the last few months, and all other supplies have gone up proportionately.

We are not authorized to make the statement, but believe this advance in price is only temporary, and that when coal resumes the normal figure we will be furnished this convenient light at the old price.

No one will be affected to any great extent, by twenty per cent. advance, as it will make but a small difference to the individual consumer, and for the convenience and excellent service rendered by that Company and the manifest necessity to prevent a loss, we believe no person will make any serious objections.

We would infinitely prefer noting the advance in the price of anything, rather than a decline, for it gives evidence of prosperity, from the fact that there is a demand for all materials of every description.
